Happy Birthday, Fresno County Farm Bureau!

Fresno County Farm Bureau (FCFB) has 100 reasons to celebrate in 2017... it's our centennial! An amazing feat for any organization and one worthy of great celebration. This year will be beyond just a party for FCFB, though; it will undoubtedly incorporate the vibrant agricultural community that has grown up with Farm Bureau. Our industry is nothing without the people who have dedicated their blood, sweat and tears to it. This occasion gives us the opportunity to dive into the many stories of FCFB members through the generations who have built this landscape into the food capital of the world. Obviously, California agriculture has changed over the years, yet the constant has remained that we have the most dedicated individuals to this industry found nowhere else.

While a centennial is usually associated with remembering of the past, it also gives FCFB the opportunity to generate excitement as we delve into our next 100 years! We have been, and will continue to be, a significant part of this region's economic engine that helps feed the world. The centennial allows us the chance to raise our visibility within the agricultural and general communities. FCFB is as much of a necessity today for the industry as it was back in 1917. The issues have evolved over the years, but the grassroots participation of Farm Bureau members is as important as ever. It's a chance to reinvigorate our membership and bring those not at the table to it. Our strength is in our numbers... "We must, indeed, all hang together or, most assuredly, we shall all hang separately."

We are the first to recognize it's difficult to celebrate for many in our industry with the plethora of challenges we are facing; however, FCFB will continue the fight to bring attention to issues we face as farmers and ranchers to ensure the future viability of our industry. It is through our optimism and stories during recognition events like our centennial that we can continue to cultivate champions and advocates for our industry beyond just agriculture. Almost everyone eats at least three times a day (or more!), and FCFB needs to remind them of this! We need to talk about the positives of our industry.

Please make an effort to join us at our numerous events planned throughout the year. We look forward to commemorating with you!

About Fresno County Farm Bureau

“Farm Bureaus are a natural outgrowth of the desire of American farmers to do two things. First to unite together for mutual self-help and cooperation along any line that may be needed, and second, to get into close and intimate touch with those institutions of public enterprise and of the government which have accumulated the information necessary to make farm life more prosperous.” - B.H. Crocheron, UC Berkeley Circular No. 209, March 1919

Founded in 1917, FCFB is an organization dedicated to promoting and protecting agriculture. Inspired by a desire among farmers nationwide to unite, first mention of a Farm Bureau organization appeared in 1910 in the state of New York. Local county Farm Bureaus were established in various areas of the country over the next few years. On October 23, 1919, county Farm Bureaus in California formed the California Farm Bureau Federation. The following month, on November 12-13, 1919, the newly formed California Farm Bureau Federation joined with several other state organizations to form the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The Smith-Lever Act of 1914, which set up the Agriculture Extension Service, stipulated that before a county could obtain farm advisor services, it had to form a general farm organization through which the Extension Service could disseminate information and promote better farming methods. In the fall of 1917, George Feaver, J.A. Poytress, Sam Heisinger, H.W. Wrightson and Charles Parlier were among a group of farmers that met with Leroy Smith, the first Extension Service farm advisor assigned to Fresno County, to lay the groundwork for a FCFB organization.

After 100 years, FCFB continues to lead the industry and community in addressing issues that result in long-term economic viability for agriculture in the region. The organization focuses heavily on advocating for legislation that affects the viability of agriculture; educates farmers and ranchers on critical issues; and keeps the community informed on policies that shape the industry.
